

PIMPLES ON FACE CUTICURA HEALS

Formed Blackheads. Scaled Over. Burned and Itched.

"I had pimples on my face and they afterwards took the form of blackheads. They were hard, large and red, and they scaled over. They were in blotches and burned when I perspired, and they itched. They caused disfigurement."

"This trouble lasted about one year before I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In three weeks I got relief, and three boxes of Cuticura Ointment healed me." (Signed) Jos. J. Smith, 14 Beany St., New Britain, Conn., Aug. 14, 1918.

SOUTH WILLINGTON

Holman Hall received last week a beautifully mounted trout which was caught last fall while on a fishing trip with his father, C. W. H. Hall. When caught the trout weighed four pounds, four ounces. It was caught in the Metabachuan river, in Kiskadee county, Province of Quebec, Canada. It was mounted by Mr. C. W. H. Hall, who is now residing in South Willington.

The methods employed by stock promoters to fleece the unwary are explained by Mr. K. H. Kline, in a report to the committee on the investigation of the stock market, which is now in the possession of the district attorney of New York as the result of some 4,000 or 5,000 complaints investigated in his office.

Interest in the subject of the existence of a planet more remote from the sun than Uranus has been revived by the announcement that the outermost planet now known, has been discovered by the astronomer, Mr. K. STOCK PROMOTORS AND SWINDLERS

New York, Jan. 14.—Stock promoters and swindlers who have been driven from 25 states where "blue sky" laws exist, are flourishing in New York as never before, according to Edwin F. Kline, assistant district attorney in charge of the investigation of commercial frauds.

Mr. Kline charges that most of the operators are composed of "confidence men, ex-convicts, racketeers, touters, gamblers and men of the baser sort" who, as soon as their crooked work is made public move to another part of the metropolis and resume business under another name.

"It is remarkable," says he, "that in this state, which is the financial center of the world, the investing public should be left without protection and that the Dark Age law of caveat emptor should reign here."

Attacking the majority report of Governor Smith's Blue Sky Law commission as "a prayer to allow the predatory Wall Street interests to continue their pillage without let or hindrance," Mr. Kline, in a report to the District Attorney, opposes the recommendation to turn the prosecution of crooked Wall Street concerns over to four deputies and the attorney general of the state.

"The recommendation," he says, "that nothing be done by the present legislature except the appointment of a commission to study the penal law is inexpedient and would accomplish no good result. All of the facts a commission has now in the possession of the district attorney of New York as the result of some 4,000 or 5,000 complaints investigated in his office."

today every good citizen who happens to be inexperienced in the world of finance is a possible victim, provided he has a small bank account or government bonds.

"Schools are established to make the smooth-tongued salesman more smooth and books of instruction are prepared so that no one even with small savings shall escape their lure."

The lure of speculation has, of course, produced a corresponding volume of attendant crime, corruption and dishonesty. The increase in the number and amount of Liberty Bond thefts during the past seven or eight months is a matter of great concern in the financial district and in the administration of the criminal law.

Mr. Kline advocates as a remedy for existing conditions (1) the government licensing and control of stock exchanges; (2) similar licensing for stock bond and other investment security dealers; (3) driving of the New York Curb market from the street as a public nuisance; (4) compulsory disclosure of public information, plans, etc., of concerns before they may offer stock for sale; (5) a federal "Blue Sky Law" which would prevent swindlers in other states from doing business by mail, telegraph or other interstate means with prospective victims in New York.

The amount and direction of the deviation of Uranus made it possible after much difficult mathematical computation, to state in which direction the planet must be and other things about it. Such a computation was made, and the new planet Neptune was found within half an hour after the telescope was turned on the place. The difficulties attending this computation are appreciated by astronomers, and naturally they were elated over the success.

It is now found that Neptune moves not quite in agreement with the law of gravitation, and Uranus also still has deviations, so that again a more remote body seems to be responsible for the deviations. A number of astronomers have worked upon the problem and have indicated the direction in which they think the planet must be. The deviations are so slight that the predicted direction can scarcely be expected to be very precise. Several searches have been made for the planet previously, but they have not proved successful.

This, however, is not a bit surprising, for the distance of the planet and the size assigned to it are such that to discover it would require the use of our very best telescopes, and even they may prove too small. The search must be made by photography. Even though the planet impressed itself on the plate distinctly, the very large number of faint stars which exist and the slow motion of the planet make its detection very difficult. The new planet is expected to be nearly twice as far away as Neptune and somewhere between the earth and Neptune in size.

It is found that the new 100-inch reflecting telescope of the Mount Wilson Solar observatory, the largest and most powerful telescope in the world, is giving results which are all that could be hoped for.

On the morning of January 17, at 5.37, the moon will pass very close to the planet Venus. At places further south and west it will pass over the planet Jupiter can now be seen in the east in the early evening, although it is a morning star until February 3. It will then be an evening star until August 22. Saturn is an evening star from February 28 to September 7. Venus is an evening star from July 3. It will be conspicuous at the end of the year.

Mars comes closer to the earth this year than for several years, but not nearly as close as in 1922. It is closest this year on April 28, at a distance of 54,000,000 miles. There will be four eclipses this year, two of them visible here—a total eclipse of the moon, visible here in the early evening on May 2, and a partial eclipse of the sun on November 10. Less than a third of the sun's diameter will be hidden here.
